History [edit]

Poker has been appearing on television somewhat regularly since the late-1970s. In the United States, CBS started airing the final table of the World Series of Poker (WSOP) Main Event as an annual one-hour show around this time and later by ESPN, which were casino-produced shows produced under a time-buy arrangement for sports omnibus programming such as the CBS Sports Spectacular. For many years, the coverage was less than robust because viewers at home could not see what cards the players had or follow their progress visually through graphics. Instead, the coverage essentially involved the commentators guessing what cards the players had in a documentary style production.

In 1997, the hole cam, which allows audiences to see the hidden cards that players held in their hands, was introduced in Europe. The hole cam was patented by WSOP bracelet winner Henry Orenstein and first used in the Late Night Poker television series. It was used again in the inaugural 2 Poker Million tournament in 2000 which boasted the attraction of the first £1,000,000 poker game on live television. By 1996, however, the ESPN one-hour highlight show only included hands that were shown down, so that the commentators, including Gabe Kaplan, could comment, in post-production, on the hands while they were being played out. The commentators referred to this as "taking a peek at the cards", and provided the first contemporary announcing on hands during the play in poker history. By 2001, however, Late Night Poker had been cancelled in the UK and televised poker could no longer be found in Europe. In the US, the 1999, 2000, and 2001 World Series of Poker events were only broadcast in one-hour documentaries on the Discovery Networks.

In 1999, documentary filmmaker Steven Lipscomb produced and directed a documentary on the WSOP for the Discovery Channel. It was the first U.S. poker production funded entirely by a television network rather than the casino. When the 1999 WSOP aired, it doubled its audience over the hour time slot. Seeing the audience reaction, Lipscomb believed there was an untapped market and began pitching poker series ideas to cable and network television. Because poker had been on the air for over twenty years, with little viewer interest, broadcasters were unwilling to commit resources to put a series on the air.

In October 2001, Lipscomb wrote a business plan. Along with poker player Mike Sexton and poker business woman Linda Johnson, Lipscomb approached casino mogul and avid poker player, Lyle Berman, whose company Lakes Entertainment agreed to fund the World Poker Tour (WPT)—the first organized and televised tour of poker tournaments in the world.

Avaliação do filme japonês "Lumberjack the Monster" de Takashi Miike

O ano de 1999, marcado por filmes clássicos como "The Sixth Sense", "The Matrix" e "Fight Club", também ficou marcado pelo filme de terror e sátira "Audition", de Takashi Miike. Esse filme é um conto sinistro e violento sobre política sexual e mal-estar nacional que consagrou Miike como mestre do macabro e do extremo.

Embora Miike nunca tenha igualado a crueldade e o medo de "Audition", é inquestionável a produtividade e estilo único de misturar tudo em seus filmes. Seu mais recente filme, "Lumberjack the Monster", apresenta um assassino em série que ataca pessoas com um machado e remove seus cérebros.

O detetive Toshiro (Nanao Arai) está atrás desse assassino. No entanto, o assassino encontra alguém tão inumano quanto ele mesmo: o advogado Akira (Kazuya Kamenashi). Akira tem sua própria história de violência, tendo matado o pai e a noiva para herdar seu escritório de advocacia e fazendo experimentos sombrios com um cirurgião corrupto. Akira decide se vingar do "Lumberjack the Monster", mas seu encontro pode ser resultado de serem ambos vítimas de um sequestrador em série que implantou "neuro chips" em suas vítimas quando crianças.

O filme é uma exibição completamente louca e operaticamente exagerada. Embora haja um aspecto "whodunnit" no desmascaramento do Lumberjack, a história carece da plausibilidade narrativa que outros gêneros podem sentir a necessidade de incluir para que o público se engaje emocionalmente. Como muitos filmes de Miike, "Lumberjack the Monster" é um espetáculo de estranheza, alienação e nihilismo.
